Forecast for Sunday 11 Jun 2023

Weather: A mainly dry start to the day and any lingering showers in the west should move away with it brightening up. Morning sunshine and feeling warm out on the hills despite the brisk winds. Afternoon showers, potential thunderstorms with hail, are expected, most likely areas are further northwest like the Monadliaths and towards Ben Alder with the Cairngorms most likely to avoid thundery showers. Some place will remain dry. Showers tending to die out later in the evening.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 800m: 90% hill tops will generally be cloud free but cloud may thicken and lower in heavier showers in the west.

Low cloud and visibility: Patchy or scattered cloud may form above 600m near any showers, more likely in the west of the area. Very good visibility although it may turn hazy in the afternoon, visibility will become moderate or poor in any heavy showers.
